

CONVERGENCE THROUGH CREATIVE WRITING WITH MR. FRED

Mr. Fred's workshops:

"How many things do we experience without giving ourselves the chance to reflect upon them? Few things are as thought-provoking and overwhelming as travelling, living abroad and meeting people from different cultures. An expatriate myself, I would like to guide you through a series of self-reflexive activities that will help you put words on your feelings and re-explore the various stages of your impressions towards being in India and/or in a multicultural environment; as well as to try and put yourself in "the other's role". We'll also explore various mediums to convey your texts to others, in either writing or oral form!

Mr. Fred's background:

Mr. Fred is a language teacher at day and a writer at night. After being a cultural projects manager in France for more than a decade, he graduated in teaching languages and moved to Asia. He has authored two books and virtually touched every possible genre of writing: literature, poetry, song writing, articles, children stories, comics and film scripts, etc. He is currently working on finishing two new books and recording a spoken word album with a French composer.
